book, Consumer Behavior. Activation of NF-kappa B and JNK by the hepatitis C virus core protein and effects of polyunsaturated fatty acids. The hepatitis C virus (HCV) core protein is an essential component of the viral replication complex and plays a role in the induction of host immune response. Activation of NF-kappaB and JNK, downstream signaling molecules of interleukin-6 (IL-6) and tumor necrosis factor (TNF), which are induced by the core protein, was detected in vivo and in vitro. The core protein of HCV not only induced NF-kappaB activation in all cell lines tested but also activated JNK in HepG2.2.15 and Huh-7 cells. The results indicate that the core protein plays an important role in the regulation of cellular immunity by stimulating immune signaling molecule activation. Polyunsaturated fatty acids, which regulate signal transduction pathways and are potentially immunomodulatory agents, have an effect on the induction of NF-kappaB and JNK by the core protein. It has been shown that the core protein induces activation of NF-kappaB, JNK and its downstream signaling molecule, c-Jun, in the presence of polyunsaturated fatty acids in HepG2.2.
